

Click to prove you're human

Treehouse masters death

Ah, spring: my most hopeful (and hyper!) time of year. Birds are singing, leaves are bursting forth. Spring brings baseball games and the first BBOs of the season. I'd better get cooking—I mean, moving. People need their treehouses! So much happened this past winter—including welcoming my first grandchild, Douglas, to the treehouse life! (Read to the bottom of this post for a dose of cuteness...) It's been a full last few months of "hibernation," as I spent time with my family and planted seeds for many vibrant projects to come. Now, with spring blooming around us, the time feels ripe to reach out to you all and share some important updates. It has been, and always will be, important to me and my crew to keep you in the loop. I'd like to share the bittersweet news that we wrapped our final season of Treehouse Masters last fall—the eleventh season to air was our last. Many of you kind fans have been asking when you will see new episodes and therein lies the answer: after nearly seven years of shooting, we've said goodbye to the show. It was a collective decision, and we all felt that the time had come to feather off the gas and reflect on all the beautiful experiences we've shared together. Don't worry, we're still building treehouses—just not on television. I know this is tough news for all of you wonderful treehouse people who gathered for our regular Friday night get-togethers. We would never have been able to bring this show to life without the support from all of you. It's hard for us as well, to say goodbye to the production family that we've had the privilege of knowing over the last seven years. I'm endlessly thankful for all those who made this show come to life: the immensely talented production team, the visionary network at Animal Planet and Discovery, my own crew, our incredible clients, my family, and the fans who tuned in to follow our work. From the start, the production team and network understood how to tell the stories of our treetop escapades in the best way: one that centered on fun, camaraderie, and creativity. They captured the joy of the treehouse life—and it resonated with so many of you. I'm proud to think that Treehouse Masters brought people together and contributed a positive narrative to the ecosystem of reality TV. I'm also deeply grateful for the abundant opportunities the show brought us. It gave me the privilege of meeting so many new friends, traveling to so many new places, and working with some of the most amazing people in the construction, treehouse, and television industries. Treehouse Masters catapulted our family business to the next level. It taught me a great deal and opened my eyes to new ways of building and being up in the trees. And it made me marvel at what my own crew is capable of: their efficiency, adaptability, and innovation blew me away again and again throughout these years of showbiz. Most of all, the show connected us with thousands of people worldwide. I cannot express to you how much this means to me. Meeting you in-person and receiving your messages—your letters, emails, social media posts, and artwork—has been one of the most moving experiences of my life. It's humbling to know people of all ages and nationalities connect with our treehouses on such a deep level. Every time we shot a scene, I envisioned you at the other end of the camera lens. From the bottom of my heart, a thousand thanks for your support. But, treehouse friends, the story doesn't end here. Let's talk about the next chapter. First, I want you to know that you can stay connected to our work on all our social media platforms: Instagram, Facebook, YouTube, and the blog. You can also sign up for our email newsletter here on our website (just scroll to the bottom of this page to find the subscription form). And you can look back at builds from all eleven seasons of Treehouse Masters on our "Show" page. One treehouse we built this winter: our contemporary cabin on the san Juan Islands. On the project front: our private builds are continuing full-force around the country. We've been hard at work over the last few months, building in beautiful locations across the US for some incredibly creative people. We can't share all these projects with you, out of respect for these folks' understandable desire for privacy—but let's just say, my crew has astounded me with their craftsmanship on each of the treehouses. As always, I'm honored to be working with so many families and individuals to bring their treehouse dreams to life. Cannaleay Treehouse Village in the works at Metroparks Toledo. Photo by Metroparks Toledo. We also have a pioneering public project in development: the Cannaleay Treehouse Village at Metroparks Toledo. Partnering with Metroparks Toledo on the Treehouse Village has been such a meaningful project because it brings the joy of treehouses to more people. My team and I love working on public treehouses for that reason: getting more folks out into nature and up into the trees. This project was also particularly exciting because our team drew up the design and then taught the Metroparks builders our best practices for building in the trees. The Metroparks building team took it from there—and it's been so fun to watch as they bring the designs to life. Renovating the Temple of the Blue Moon at TreeHouse Point We've also got our hands full with our hospitality projects. At Treehouse Point in Fall City, Washington, my crew has spent the last few months upgrading the six existing treehouse rentals and drawing plans for a seventh, wheelchair-accessible treehouse. This seventh treehouse will be called "Ananda," and she'll be coming to Treehouse Point later this year! Spring ushers in prime swimming season in the river at Treehouse Utopia Down at Treehouse Utopia in Texas Hill Country, poppies are blooming as we approach the one-year anniversary of the resort's grand opening. I've heard such beautiful feedback from guests who've stayed in our Utopia trees, and I'm so proud of this magical place we built in partnership with Laurel Waters. Check out this recent Forbes article about the experience of staying there overnight. Our Design for the treehouse coming to The Woods, Maine. Back in Washington State, our plans for Treehouse Resort and Spa continue to grow. I can't wait until I can share more with you about what we're dreaming up for our most ambitious hospitality project to-date. What's more, we've got a couple amazing partnerships in the works for treehouse retreats across the country. We're about to break ground on the treehouse at The Woods, Maine, in collaboration with the inspirational owners, Sam and Rob Masabny. Elevated in a lush canopy, this luxury treehouse will immerse guests in western Maine's fresh mountain air, pristine lakes, and vibrant seasons. We've poured our heart into every design detail to create a treehouse that combines the best of rustic and refined. Follow @thewoodsmaine on Instagram and stay tuned as we bring you updates from the build site—as I write this, my carpentry crew is getting ready to jet off to Maine! A sneak peek of my Treehouse Attachment Bolt for Dly-builders I'm also thrilled to announce something big we've been planting the seeds for all winter. While it's still a work in progress, we'll soon be offering a line of treehouse hardware made for the DIY-builder. This series complements my daughter, Emily's, existing "pro" lines of standard and heavy-duty hardware, making it simple for the backyard builder to bring their dream treehouse to life. My DIY line is lighter weight and will come with a more accessible price point. But it doesn't compromise on quality, ensuring that you'll have a solid and sustainable foundation for your treehouse without causing permanent damage to the trees. Stay tuned for announcements as we roll out this hardware over the coming months. In all these projects off-TV, we'll continue to strive to get folks out into nature and up into the trees in a fun, safe, and sustainable way. Thank you for joining us on the Treehouse Masters journey for so many years. Thank you for cheering on our builds. Thank you for caring about our crew. Thank you for letting us into your living rooms, and for sharing your treehouse dreams with us. This show has been a highlight of my life, and I will forever be grateful for this experience. I can't wait to take you with us as we spring forward into our next chapter of the treehouse life. Thank you. And, as always: To the trees! P.S. Here's to new beginnings with Douglas, my first grandchild! (I just can't resist sharing a few Douglas pics...) Proud parents! Emily and Patrick welcomed Douglas to the treehouse life in January 2019. Me giving Douglas his very first carpentry lesson. Verifying that you are not a robot... Have you ever thought of owning a treehouse? Not the typical bunch of planks of wood your parents stacked together when you were young, but something magnificent with electricity, running water and modern décor. Treehouse Masters, a television series about building custom treehouses, gives people a touch of the best designs. However, people noticed the absence of one of the most notable characters, the lovely Tory Jones. She was among the original cast and stayed in the show for eight seasons. So, what happened to Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters? Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters, where cameras would follow him as he and his team designed and built treehouses.The television show debuted in 2013. On April 18, 2019, Pete announced that the eleventh season was the show's final run. However, Animal Planet, Discovery Channel, Discovery Family Channel and GAC airs reruns of the show and some re-edited versions.Pete Nelson's team works to assist customers in realizing their dream by creating sky-high, multi-bedroom treehouses with all amenities you can find in a regular house. In some instances, they make simple, more peaceful one-escape rooms that provide a different and natural environment for the client.Tory Jones was the show's director and interior designer that gave her all to make it look amazing. That is why she was one of the most outstanding and noticeable among Treehouse Masters cast and crew.You likely know Tory Jones as the adorable interior designer and director from Treehouse Masters. However, there is more to the character than meets the eye. How much do you know about her?Tory Jones is exceptionally qualified in her profession as she possesses an impeccable fine arts background. She started designing at a tender age and enrolled at the San Francisco Art Institute to improve her skills. She graduated from the institution with a BFA. Later, she advanced her studies and did her MFA at the California Institute of the Arts. Tory has been doing numerous designs since the late 80s and has designed multiple music videos and big-time TV specials for various famous personalities. These individuals include Tony Bennet, Barry Manilow, and Cher. Her skills and extraordinary talent in her profession have allowed her to become an Interior Design senior professor at The Art Institute of New York City.Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters. Photo: @knowtoryousToryJonesSource: FacebookIt is custom for media companies to give statements about the disappearance of a character from one of their shows. However, they sometimes play dumb, ignoring the matter, leaving fans to speculate. Unfortunately, such happened to Tory Jones after disappearing from Treehouse Masters after the eighth season. She stopped being part of the show in 2017 and has never spoken to any media company or released a statement confirming her exit. Fans were left wondering, "Why is Tory Jones not on Treehouse Masters?" and have been trying to figure out the primary reason for her exit ever since she disappeared.The art and design professional is private and is not active on social media. Therefore, her personal life is a mystery to fans. So far, there isn't any factual information in the press on the primary reason for her exiting the popular show.One of her fans reacted to Tory Jones leaving Treehouse Masters by posting the following message on Discovery's channel message board, expressing concern.Tory, sorry to see that you are missing from the show with no explanation from Pete. Your design sense is stellar and to the next level. You were more focused on pleasing clients, and it showed in your work.Who replaced Tory Jones on the show?Despite her exit from Treehouse Masters, the popular television show had to go on, and her replacement took the integral role. So, who replaced the interior designer that had become a fan favourite?The job was given to Christina Salway. She fulfilled the role from seasons 9 to 11. The television show's cast was happy to have Christina as part of the crew, considering her fantastic profile in interior design.They praised her for her design strategy when it comes to small pieces. The team also appreciated Tory's input over the years, stating that it was nothing but a privilege and pleasure working alongside her. Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters. Photo: @knowtoryousToryJonesSource: FacebookTory is a private individual, and like her disappearance, not much is known about her current activity. Also, her social media pages don't clearly indicate what she is up to currently.Did Treehouse Masters get cancelled?The show announced that they would not be returning for season 12. But, of course, many fans wondered about its sudden end, considering it had steady ratings and was loved by many people worldwide.Pete had not shared the official reason behind the series' termination but stated it was a collective decision. The inquiry, "What happened to Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters?" is common among fans that found her interesting. She has never spoken about her exit, and considering her private life, there is hardly any information about her whereabouts. However, it is safe to assume that she is advancing her career in various aspects as she had already set a great foundation in the industry.Are you trying to figure out what happened to Rhema Marvanne? Tuko.co.ke featured an interesting article about the young gospel singer who wowed the entire world with her singing prowess despite her young age.However, she has faded from the limelight and is no longer as popular as she was before. So, where is she today, and does she have any upcoming music projects?Subscribe to watch new videos Source: TUKO.co.ke Have you ever thought of owning a treehouse? Not the typical bunch of planks of wood your parents stacked together when you were young, but something magnificent with electricity, running water and modern décor. Treehouse Masters, a television series about building custom treehouses, gives people a touch of the best designs. However, people noticed the absence of one of the most notable characters, the lovely Tory Jones. She was among the original cast and stayed in the show for eight seasons. So, what happened to Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters? Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters, where cameras would follow him as he and his team designed and built treehouses.The television show debuted in 2013. On April 18, 2019, Pete announced that the eleventh season was the show's final run. However, Animal Planet, Discovery Channel, Discovery Family Channel and GAC airs reruns of the show and some re-edited versions.Pete Nelson's team works to assist customers in realizing their dream by creating sky-high, multi-bedroom treehouses with all amenities you can find in a regular house. In some instances, they make simple, more peaceful one-escape rooms that provide a different and natural environment for the client.Tory Jones was the show's director and interior designer that gave her all to make it look amazing. That is why she was one of the most outstanding and noticeable among Treehouse Masters cast and crew.You likely know Tory Jones as the adorable interior designer and director from Treehouse Masters. However, there is more to the character than meets the eye. How much do you know about her?Tory Jones is exceptionally qualified in her profession as she possesses an impeccable fine arts background. She started designing at a tender age and enrolled at the San Francisco Art Institute to improve her skills. She graduated from the institution with a BFA. Later, she advanced her studies and did her MFA at the California Institute of the Arts. Tory has been doing numerous designs since the late 80s and has designed multiple music videos and big-time TV specials for various famous personalities. These individuals include Tony Bennet, Barry Manilow, and Cher. Her skills and extraordinary talent in her profession have allowed her to become an Interior Design senior professor at The Art Institute of New York City.Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters. Photo: @knowtoryousToryJonesSource: FacebookIt is custom for media companies to give statements about the disappearance of a character from one of their shows. However, they sometimes play dumb, ignoring the matter, leaving fans to speculate. Unfortunately, such happened to Tory Jones after disappearing from Treehouse Masters after the eighth season. She stopped being part of the show in 2017 and has never spoken to any media company or released a statement confirming her exit. Fans were left wondering, "Why is Tory Jones not on Treehouse Masters?" and have been trying to figure out the primary reason for her exit ever since she disappeared.The art and design professional is private and is not active on social media. Therefore, her personal life is a mystery to fans. So far, there isn't any factual information in the press on the primary reason for her exiting the popular show.One of her fans reacted to Tory Jones leaving Treehouse Masters by posting the following message on Discovery's channel message board, expressing concern.Tory, sorry to see that you are missing from the show with no explanation from Pete. Your design sense is stellar and to the next level. You were more focused on pleasing clients, and it showed in your work.Who replaced Tory Jones on the show?Despite her exit from Treehouse Masters, the popular television show had to go on, and her replacement took the integral role. So, who replaced the interior designer that had become a fan favourite?The job was given to Christina Salway. She fulfilled the role from seasons 9 to 11. The television show's cast was happy to have Christina as part of the crew, considering her fantastic profile in interior design.They praised her for her design strategy when it comes to small pieces. The team also appreciated Tory's input over the years, stating that it was nothing but a privilege and pleasure working alongside her. Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters. Photo: @knowtoryousToryJonesSource: FacebookTory is a private individual, and like her disappearance, not much is known about her current activity. Also, her social media pages don't clearly indicate what she is up to currently.Did Treehouse Masters get cancelled?The show announced that they would not be returning for season 12. But, of course, many fans wondered about its sudden end, considering it had steady ratings and was loved by many people worldwide.Pete had not shared the official reason behind the series' termination but stated it was a collective decision. The inquiry, "What happened to Tory Jones from Treehouse Masters?" is common among fans that found her interesting. She has never spoken about her exit, and considering her private life, there is hardly any information about her whereabouts. However, it is safe to assume that she is advancing her career in various aspects as she had already set a great foundation in the industry.Are you trying to figure out what happened to Rhema Marvanne? Tuko.co.ke featured an interesting article about the young gospel singer who wowed the entire world with her singing prowess despite her young age.However, she has faded from the limelight and is no longer as popular as she was before. So, where is she today, and does she have any upcoming music projects?Subscribe to watch new videos Source: TUKO.co.ke Honoring Legacy: Treehouse Masters' impact lives on. From Pete Nelson's vision to sustainable designs, see how these structures inspire builders worldwide. Image source: The Nelson Family Treehouse Masters is a popular American television series centered around the art and craft of treehouse building. The show, which aired on Animal Planet from 2013 to 2018, captivated audiences with its unique blend of architecture, nature, and craftsmanship. At the helm of the show was Pete Nelson, a renowned treehouse builder, and designer. Pete's passion for treehouses drew viewers into a world where imagination met functionality. The show followed Pete Nelson as he and his skilled team designed and constructed custom treehouses for clients across the United States and beyond. Each episode highlighted a new project, showcasing the challenges and triumphs of building in the trees. The treehouses ranged from simple retreats to elaborate, multi-level structures. What set Treehouse Masters apart was its blend of whimsy and practicality, along with a strong emphasis on the environmental impact and sustainability. Throughout the series, the crew faced various challenges such as working with different tree species, unpredictable weather, and varying client demands. Despite these challenges, Pete's team demonstrated ingenuity and resilience in bringing the clients' dreams to life. Pete Nelson's journey into treehouse building began long before the show. With a background in construction and a passion for the outdoors, Pete combined his skills and interests to pursue a career in building unique arboreal retreats. He authored several books on treehouses, sharing his knowledge and inspiring others to explore this niche form of architecture. His approach is not just architectural but philosophical. Nelson emphasizes harmony with nature, advocating for building practices that respect and incorporate the surrounding environment. His ethos resonated with audiences who appreciated the intersection of creativity, craftsmanship, and ecology. The series popularized treehouse architecture, generating interest among hobbyists and professionals alike. Many viewers were inspired to build their own treehouses or pursue careers in related fields. The show also highlighted the potential of treehouses as unique spaces for living, working, and playing. Additionally, Treehouse Masters contributed to a broader conversation about sustainable architecture. The treehouses often incorporated recycled materials and eco-friendly designs, showcasing how creativity can address modern environmental challenges. The emphasis on sustainability helped raise awareness and inspired viewers to think about their own environmental footprints. Although Treehouse Masters ended its run in 2018, its impact continues. Pete Nelson remains a prominent figure in the treehouse community, dedicating efforts to his family-owned business, Nelson Treehouse and Supply. The company offers design and consultation services, keeping the spirit of the show alive through real-world projects. Many of the treehouses built on the show remain beloved destinations for fans. The show inspired a surge in treehouse tourism, with destinations offering guests the chance to stay in these arboreal havens. Pete's books and workshops continue to educate and inspire new generations of treehouse enthusiasts and builders. Pete's vision extended beyond television, into forests and backyards worldwide. Through innovation and passion, Treehouse Masters enriched public imagination about what's possible in the trees. During the show's run, tragedy struck the team. Alex Meyer, a talented carpenter who appeared on several episodes, passed away unexpectedly in 2016. His contribution to the show and the projects he worked on were significant. His craftsmanship and dedication were appreciated by both the team and the viewers. The death of a team member added a layer of poignancy to the program. The episodes aired after his passing included touching tributes to Meyer, celebrating his love for building and his positive impact on the crew. It was a somber reminder of the close-knit community formed around the show. After Meyer's death, Pete Nelson and the team continued to honor his memory through their work. The projects carried out in subsequent episodes showed resilience and a renewed sense of purpose. The team pushed forward, reflecting the spirit and passion that Meyer embodied. With the show's conclusion, Pete and his team focused on expanding their business and sharing their expertise. Nelson Treehouse and Supply remains a leading authority in treehouse design and construction. The team continues to champion environmentally-conscious practices, ensuring that each project uses sustainable methods. The interest generated by Treehouse Masters has fostered a community of enthusiasts who embrace treehouse building as a blend of art and nature. Workshops and events hosted by Pete and his team provide valuable learning experiences for beginners and seasoned builders alike. These events celebrate creativity and a deeper understanding of the environment. Treehouse living is an appealing concept for many, offering an escape from daily life and a reconnection with nature. The show made these personal sanctuaries accessible to a broader audience, highlighting their appeal as more than just childhood fantasies. The legacy of Treehouse Masters is seen in the ongoing interest in treehouses and sustainable building practices. Architects and designers across the globe have drawn inspiration from Pete's work. There's a growing interest in structures that harmonize with their surroundings, using materials and techniques that minimize impact on the environment. Treehouses represent a unique approach to architectural creativity. They allow builders to work with unusual shapes and incorporate natural elements into their design. The challenges and constraints posed by working with trees fuel innovation, resulting in unique, beautiful structures that are more than mere buildings. The comfort and tranquility offered by treehouses contribute to their lasting allure. They serve as reminders of the importance of preserving our natural world, encouraging a lifestyle that values sustainability and mindful living.