As you grow further and establish yourself, you can charge premium prices for your professional photography services to reflect your increased market value. There are many factors that impact how much do photographers make. A few of them include the number of prints, number of touch-ups, type of work performed and many more. Cost of running your photography business The main thing one should consider before fixing the price list is to figure out the investment amount from fixed expenses to variable costs. Make sure to take the blueprint and document everything. The cost of running your photography business includes the following: Studio costs Equipment costs Marketing costs Staff salaries Any other general expenses Know your Competition As a professional photographer, you should know your competitors and how they are charging for photography services. You can do this work by creating an Excel Sheet to list your competitor's names and their prices. Once you have done this work, it is easy for you to decide your range of price list. Know your ideal client Set lower prices if you want to attract the maximum number of customers who are looking for their annual family portrait. Choose your client first and then decide the price list accordingly. Cost of your time and labor "Time is Money"—Most valuable words of Benjamin Franklin. Yes, most of the photographers invest a lot of time on their projects and less concentrate on their time off work. Hence, they fail to shine in this business. So, be realistic and try to consider your time of labour and overages that are expected to happen especially in wedding photo shoots. Adding your profit margin Your profit margin is the main key point which will decide your take-home income. It may differ from your project to project but think wisely and determine your price list adding your profit margin. Offer special deals and discounts Offering special deals and promotions helps you to get more projects and clients in a short period of time. You can take advantage of special days to implement this idea like Christmas, Valentine's Day, New Year's Eve, Easter, Thanksgiving, and Halloween etc. Instead of discounts, you can offer them a special bonus like extra prints or poses on top of your basic package.
