Website 2 2 1 2 0 0 Temas relacionados: A estas alturas nadie duda de que el ftbol es algo universal. Cuando hablamos del deporte rey olvidamos las diferencias sociales, las culturas y los credos. Y tambín las diferencias de gnero pueden quedar al margen, porque el baln no entiende de sexos (y ah est la Ronaldinha para demostrarlo). Eso no quita que, bueno, ver a una chica menearse con el esférico en los pies siga resultando algo inusual, exótico y divertido. Por eso la directora india Gurinder Chadha da en el clavo al utilizar el ftbol como metfora de la vida moderna y de la mentalidad occidental.Para ello se vale de la historia de Jesminder, una joven india de 18 aos que vive en Londres. Jess es una fanática del ftbol, del Manchester United y de David Beckham. La estrella del equipo. Ponerse a jugar al ftbol, suea con jugar al ftbol. Por eso cuando otra chica llamada Jules le propone entrar en el equipo lo de ftbol femenino, Jess no se lo piensa dos veces. Sin embargo tendr que luchar contra los mil y un obstculos con que le hace tropezar su familia india, enormemente celosa de las tradiciones heredadas de su origen cultural. Las divertidas situaciones de enredo, la amistad y el amor, son otros tantos temas con que la directora completa su benfica visin de la sociedad multicultural, donde las diferencias de educacin y las tradiciones del pasado, no son obstculos, sino enriquecimiento para la convivencia. Segn la directora, la escena de la boda fue una de las ms interesantes de la película: Para que los extras fueran convincentes recur a un montn de parientes mos, especialmente a mi madre y mis tas, pero diríriglas fue una pesadilla. Mi madre me interrumpa constantemente. lllamndome a gritos por mi sobrenombre indio delante de todo el mundo. Fue muy embarazoso. Yo habra querido decir: Mam, por favor!, y ella habra querido ponerse a gritar en punjabi que tal ta ma se esconda de la cmara o que tal otra estaba demasiado lejos. Fue muy divertido. La directora Gurinder Chadha comprob durante la final del Mundial 98 la pasin por el ftbol en Inglaterra, lo que le inspiró esta película. Reportera de la BBC y autora de varios largos, la directora incorpo elementos autobiográficos, pues ella es de origen hind, y la relacin con sus padres es parecida a la de la protagonista. The film stars Parminder Nagra, Keira Knightley, Jonathan Rhys Meyers, Anupam Kher, Juliet Stevenson, Shaznay Lewis and Archie Panjabi.[7] In Bend It Like Beckham, Jesminder Bhamra (Nagra) and Jules Paxton (Knightley) chase careers in professional football despite their parents' wishes.Development for the film began after Chadha, Bindra, and Berges completed the screenplay by early 2001. Nagra and Knightley were hired soon after, with casting rounded out with the additions of Meyers, Kher, Stevenson, Lewis, and Panjabi by that May. Principal photography began in June 2001 and lasted until September, with filming locations including London, Shepperton Studios, and Hamburg. Production collaborated with The Football Association, while the film's title refers to David Beckham's curling free kick technique, also known as bending.[8][9]Bend It Like Beckham was theatrically released first in the United Kingdom on 12 April 2002 by Helkon SK. The film surprised critics, who praised the screenplay, light-hearted tone, and commentary on Punjabi social norms and culture. Bend It Like Beckham grossed $76.6million at the box office, making it the highest-grossing football sports film.[10] In 2015 it was adapted into a stage musical that opened at the Phoenix Theatre.[11]18-year-old Jesminder "Jess" Bhamra is the daughter of British Indian Punjabi Sikhs living in Hounslow, London. Jess is passionate about football, but her parents do not support her interest, preferring that she focus on academics. However, she sometimes plays in the park with boys, including her best friend, Tony, who is thought to be interested in Jess. Jess's family is occupied with planning for the upcoming wedding of her older sister, Pinky Jules Paxton, a member of the Hounslow Harriers, a local women's amateur football team, notices Jess's football skills and befriends her, inviting her to try out for the team. The coach, Joe, a young Irish former player whose own career was derailed by injuries, accepts her into the team. Although Jess's parents forbid her to join the team, she continues playing in secret, claiming to have a summer job when she is actually at football practice. When Joe learns that Jess is on the team without her parents' permission, he pleads with Mr. Bhamra to allow Jess to play, but he refuses, revealing that he does not want Jess to suffer the way he did when he was excluded from a cricket club because of anti-Indian sentiment.With Pinky playing for her, Jess travels with the team to play a match in Germany; the Harriers lose the match after Jess fails to score a penalty kick. When they go out clubbing in Hamburg after the match, Jules catches Joe and Jess about to kiss. This sours the two girls' friendship, as Jules is also attracted to Joe. Furthermore, Jess's parents find out she is still playing football after her father sees a newspaper article about the Hamburg match. After returning, Jess goes to Jules's house to try to reconcile their friendship but is rebuffed. Jules's mother, confused by overhearing parts of their argument out of context, thinks they are in a lesbian relationship.Jess's father secretly attends one of her games and sees Jess mocked with a racial slur by an opposing player, and Joe hugging her afterward to comfort her. The Harriers qualify for the finals of the league tournament, but the championship match, with an American talent scout in attendance, is to be held on the same day as Pinky's wedding, so Jess resigns herself to missing the game. At Pinky's wedding, Jess is visibly miserable; her father tells her to go to the game so she can be happy on her sister's wedding day. The Harriers are behind 10 when Jess arrives, but they rally, and eventually, Jess wins the game with a free kick. The scout offers Jess and Jules sports scholarships at Santa Clara University in California. Jules and Jess share a hug and kiss to celebrate, furthering Jules's mother's suspicions. Jess returns to the wedding, happy and able to celebrate. Jules heads to the wedding as well, being given a ride by her mother, who, upon arriving, confronts Jess and accuses her of being a hypocrite and a lesbian. Jules drags her mother away, angrily clarifying her friendship with Jess and her sexual orientation.Later that day, Jess fears her parents will not allow her to accept the scholarship. Tony, revealing he is secretly gay to Jess, decides to lie to the family and tell them he will get engaged to Jess as long as she gets to go to any college she wants. The Bhamras happily accept, but Jess immediately confesses the truth. Jess's mother ignores Jess's heartfelt speech and scolds Jess's father for letting Jess leave Pinky's wedding. Her father announces he doesn't want Jess to suffer as he did and accepts her desire to play football, eventually leading her mother to finally accept it as well. At the football field, Jess and Joe almost kiss, but Jess pulls away, saying her parents would object, and that although they had come far enough to let her go to the United States to play, she doesn't think they would be able to handle another cultural rebellion from her.On the day of Jess and Jules's fight to the United States, the two are about to board the plane when Joe arrives and confesses his love for Jess. The two kiss secretly and Jess agrees to sort out their relationship when she returns for Christmas. While at the airport, they see David Beckham with his wife Victoria, which Jules takes as a good sign. The two leave through the gate waving happily to their families.While Jess and Jules are away, they send a team photo indicating their continued success in football. Pinky is revealed to be pregnant and Mr. Bhamra gets back into playing cricket with Joe and Pinky's husband.Parminder Nagra as Jesminder "Jess" Kaur Bhamra, an 18-year old Punjabi Sikh who dreams of playing soccer like her idol, David BeckhamKeira Knightley as Juliette "Jules" Paxton, a player of the Hounslow Harriers who becomes Jess' teammate and best friendArchie Panjabi as "Pinky" Kaur Bhamra, Jess's older sisterJonathan Rhys Meyers as Joe, coach of the Hounslow Harriers and Jess' eventual boyfriendShaznay Lewis as Marlena "Mel" Goimes, the captain of the Hounslow HarriersAnupam Kher as Mohaan Singh Bhamra, a former cricketer and Jess' dadShaheen Khan as Mrs "Sukhi" Kaur Bhamra, Jess' strict mother who despises her daughter's soccer ambitionFrank Harper as Alan Paxton, Juliette's fatherJuliet Stevenson as Paula Paxton, Juliette's motherAmeeta Chana as Tony, Jess' best friendKulvinder Ghir as Tejinder "Teetu" Ash Varrez as Teetu's dadPoja Shah as MeemaPreya Kalidas as MonicaTrey Farley as TazZohra Chaudhry as BijjSaraj Chaudhry as SonnyPaven Virk as BubbyEmma Daly as team playerNina Wadia as Wedding CatererArce Bharti as Nairobi GrandsonGary Lineker as himself, former professional footballer turned sports commentator who appears in Jess' imaginary dream sequenceAlan Hansen as himself, former professional footballer turned sports commentator who appears in Jess' dream sequenceJon Barnes as himself, former professional footballer turned sports commentator who appears in Jess' imaginary dream sceneAdditionally David and Victoria Beckham appear in non-speaking cameos in the airport scene at the film's conclusion, though David Beckham was portrayed by lookalike Andy Harmer due to scheduling conflicts while his wife was played by Gill Penny; the real David Beckham does appear via football archive footage and even in posters at Jess' bedroom, alongside other Manchester United players such as Ryan Giggs. Other players also appear via archive footage such as Mia Hamm and Brandi Chastain in a commercial shown at Jules house.Gurinder Chadha co-wrote the script with Guljit Bindra and screenwriter partner Paul Mayeda Berges. Nayar and Chadha actively pursued financing for the film at Sundance Film Festival. Having previously worked with Road Movies, a German production company on several other projects, Nayar approached them and they came on board, followed by British Screen and The Film Council. The film is loosely based on the life of Permi Jhooi.[12]Helkon SK, formerly known as Redbus, picked up the script. Fox Searchlight Pictures picked up the rights for distribution in the United States at the Cannes Film Festival in 2002.[13] For its American cinema release it was suggested that the title of the movie be changed to Move It Like Mia, as marketers were concerned that American viewers would be unfamiliar with David Beckham.[14]Principal photography began on 18 June 2001. A variety of locations around London and Shepperton Studios, Surrey, were used for the nine-week shoot, with the semi-final taping place over a three-day period in Hamburg, Germany.[13]The film was situated in Hounslow in West London.Chadha, who played an active role in casting, chose Parminder Nagra and Keira Knightley, who would play the two lead roles in the film, while Archie Panjabi and Jonathan Rhys Meyers were in early talks to join the cast. Shaz's father, Anupam Kher, was also in final talks. Juliet Stevenson and Frank Harper joined as Paula Paxton and Alan Paxton, mother and father of Jules.For the role of Jess's mother, Mrs Bhamra, Chadha turned to Shaheen Khan, whom she had previously cast in Bhaji on the Beach. Anupam Kher, a Bollywood actor, was cast as Mr Bhamra, Jess's father. Chadha worked with The Football Association and ended up casting actual players from a variety of school teams.[13]Bend It Like Beckham was released theatrically on 12 April 2002 by Redbus Film Distribution. The film then received a limited theatrical release in the United States on 12 March 2003 by Fox Searchlight Pictures. When originally released in the United Kingdom, it topped the country's box office for the next three weekends, before being overtaken by About a Boy.[15][16]On the North American Billboard video charts, the film entered the top ten of the Top DVD Sales and Top DVD Rentals charts, at number six on Top VHS Sales, and number seven on Top VHS Rentals.[17] In the United Kingdom, it was the sixth most-watched film of 2003 on subscription television, with 810,000 viewers on Sky Premier that year.[18] It was later the most-watched film on UK television during the first half of 2005, with 7.3 million viewers on BBC1 during that period.[19]To mark the tenth anniversary of North Korea's relations with the United Kingdom, an edited version of Bend It Like Beckham was broadcast on North Korean state television on 26 December 2010. Boxing Day. The British Ambassador to South Korea, Martin Uden, said it was the "first-ever Western-made film to air on television" in North Korea.[20][21]Bend It Like Beckham surprised critics and met with mostly positive reviews. Review aggregation website Rotten Tomatoes gives the film a score of 85% based on 157 reviews, with an average rating of 7.2/10. The consensus states, "Inspiring, compassionate, and with a sly undercurrent of social commentary, Bend It Like Beckham is a lively feel-good movie that genuinely charms." [22] Metacritic gave the movie a score of 66 based on 32 reviews, indicating "generally favorable" reviews.[23]Kenneth Turan of the Los Angeles Times noted that the film "was really full of easy humor, an impeccable sense of milieu that is the result of knowing the culture intimately. Light-hearted, without taking away the considerable substance in terms of values, attitudes and the love for sport, the film just goes to prove that there are ways to be convincing and honest." [27]Jamie Russell at the BBC gave it 4 out of 5 stars, and argued that "Mr Beckham ought to be proud to have his name on such a great film." [28] The British film was distributed by iDream Productions in India.[29] and went on to set the record in India for most tickets sold during a single weekend for a foreign movie.[citation needed]Bend it Like Beckham has also been favorably received by LGBTQ+ community members and press, with one reviewer from Vice noting its discussion of queer themes and symbolic queer undertones. The reviewer also shares: "Keira Knightley told PrideSource that she wants a lesbian Bend It Like Beckham sequel and agreed that her and Parminder's characters should've ended up together." [n the United Kingdom, the film grossed over 1 billion, making it one of the highest-grossing Black/Asian-themed British films.[30] With $32.5 million in US box office revenue,[31] Bend It Like Beckham became the highest-grossing Indian-themed film in the United States[32] since Gandhi (1982).[33] At the time of its release, Bend It Like Beckham became the highest-grossing association football themed sports film in the United States; [24]The Times of India noted the film's social context, saying, "[I]t is really about the bending of rules, social paradigms and lives all to finally curl that ball, bending it like Beckham, through the goalpost of ambition. . . The creeping divide shows that Britain is changing, but hasn't quite changed yet. The stiff upper lip has traveled miles from the time Chadha's father was denied a pint at some pubs at Southall, but like dollops of coagulated spice in badly stirred curry, discrimination crops up to spoil the taste, every now and then, in multi-racial Britain." [25]Planet Bollywood gave the film a mark of 9 out of 10: the "screenplay not only explores the development of Jess as a person, but also the changing values and culture of NRI teens; Jess's urge to break the social norm of the Indian home-maker, her sister's (Archie Panjabi) sexually active relationship, and the gay Indian [Tony, played by Ameeta Chana]."[26]The Hindu argued, "If ever there is a film that is positive, realistic and yet delightful, then it has to be Dream Production's latest venture directed by Gurinder Chadha... Light-hearted, without taking away the considerable substance in terms of values, attitudes and the love for sport, the film just goes to prove that there are ways to be convincing and honest."
